Mint of the United States at Philadelphia, Pa.,

SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,

July 6th 1887

Sir,

I hand to you a copy of the descriptive list of pattern coins struck in the Mint, 341 coins are described, 287 numbers. Some sets of coins, in which all the different denominations bear the same design, belong to one number.

The list is numbered with red ink for reference. I was directed to mark all hybrids or mules, and other peculiarities. I have been trying to get the correct meaning of the word "Mule" as understood by numismatists.

The obverse or reverse of one coin or medal used in connection with the obverse or reverse of another, to strike an odd or unique piece.

The obverse or reverse of the work of one Artist combined with that of another artist, for the purpose of making a unique coin, is a Mule.

But if two artists are instructed by by the proper authority, to work a new design together, one, the obverse, and the other the reverse, the coin resulting would not be a "mule". There are a good many ways in which they can be made. It depends upon the object of the combination made. Under the above definition I do not think there are any mules in the list.

There are a number of peculiarities that will point out, by referring to the red numbers.

PRODUCED AT THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES

Numbers,—14, 24, 124, 251 & 283 were adopted and issued the same year. Nos 50, 59, 70, 71, 73, 114, 119, 120 & 125, were issued the years following.

Nos. 13 to 21 inclusive, consist of 3 obverses and 4 reverses, which combined make 9 varieties. 50 to 61,—3 obverses and 4 reverses, make 12 varieties. 124 to 137.— 6 obverses & 5 reverses—make 14 varieties. The Obverse of 231 appears to have 5 different reverses, Nos. 81, 82, 84 & 85, were first struck in 1861, and restruck in 1862 & 1863.

Dr. Robt. C Davis list as published in the "Coin Collector's Journal" consist of 479 pieces. Only 341 pieces are described in my list.
